MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED WALKED THE VILLAGE ON ONE OF OUR MANY TOURS

Over the last few years, The ArQuives (formerly the CLGA) has learned that embracing change, engagement, disruption, and new challenges is key to unlocking our communities’ strengths and ensuring we remain relevant for years to come. In 2018 we put this principle into practice and reshaped the path we are taking in aid of collecting, preserving, and sharing the diverse stories of LGBTQ2+ people in Canada. In the process we achieved some landmark accomplishments — turning points to make sure we remain the largest independent LGBTQ2+ archives in the world. Among 2018’s challenges were securing foundational funding, a new name, the broadening of our collection, outreach and programming, and making the archives physically and digitally accessible.

2018 witnessed our archivists make significant progress in processing wide ranging fonds, such as The Body Politic and The Coalition for Lesbian and Gay Rights in Ontario, and broadening our collections with new and more diverse donations from people and groups such as the two-spirit trans sex work activist Monica Forrester, the Inside Out Festival, Supporting Our Youth (SOY), and 2-Spirited People of the 1st Nations. We also turned our attention to renovating The Jared Session House (34 Isabella) to make it physically accessible. The six-month long construction site to build a new front entrance was a challenge, but it did not deter our stakeholders — public hours ran as usual, and more than 650 revellers found their way to the back door for our Nuit Blanche Exhibition. With the support of TD and the Pride and Remembrance Run we updated our internal databases to create a new digital portal for world-wide access to our collections. Last year’s outreach initiatives and programming were further activated and diversified with the inclusion of new volunteers and staff — the impact of which will be felt for years to come.

In this report you will find more details of what made 2018 a pivotal moment in our history, all of which would not be possible without your support. We want to thank everyone who contributed to making The ArQuives what it is — keeping us connected to our histories and moving forward with us as we change and grow. Thank you to our volunteers, Board of Directors, our committed staff, and our generous donors who trust us with their collections and their support. Without all of you we would not be able to pursue our mission to be The ArQuives, Canada’s LGBTQ2+ Archives, and keep our stories alive.

What’s in a name? A question that our communities and the archives have struggled with for decades. Since our inception in 1973, we have already changed our name three times to fit our mandate and respond to the evolving LGBTQ2+ landscape — and 2018 marked a fourth time for a new name to embrace the diversity of our communities and collections. We spent six months reaching out to our stakeholders, through both online surveys and one-on-one interviews, and recognized the persistence and growth of communities not represented in our previous name: most notably trans, queer, bisexual, and 2-Spirit folks. Our goal was a name that would carry on our legacy and advance our expanding role as a vital resource and repository. In early 2018, we chose the name The ArQuives, Canada’s LGBTQ2+ Archives and started working on our visual identity. Over time, it is through our actions and programming that our new name will garner significant meaning to our stakeholders.

The ArQuives was one of the beneficiaries of the 2018 Pride and Remembrance Run in Toronto. The funds were earmarked to create the digital hub for worldwide access to our holdings. The 5 km run and 3 km walk held during Pride weekend was a huge success, despite the rain. And in March 2019, with the help of Pride and Remembrance Run, TD Bank, and the essential work of our staff and volunteers we launched our digital portal for worldwide access to our collections.
ARRIVING AND DEPARTING AT THE MYSEUM:INTERSECTIONS FESTIVAL AND THE 519

In March of 2018, The ArQuives partnered with two exhibits at the 519 as part of the Myseum:Intersections Festival – a festival exploring intersectional perspectives on Toronto and its history. The 2018 theme was “Arrivals and Departures.”

Former The ArQuives intern, Sid Cunningham, curated Jeanne B ’93: A Gendertroublemaker Arrives, an exhibit of the work of transsexual artist and activist Mirha-Soleil Ross drawing from the Mirha-Soleil Ross fonds – one of the two largest personal trans collections at The ArQuives.

Mirha-Soleil Ross’s film with Xantrha Phillipa Mackay, Gendertroublemakers (1993), was screened at the opening reception and visitors to an exhibit workshop engaged with this important history by recreating activist buttons from Mirha-Soleil Ross’s influential zine Gendertrash.

The exhibit Escondidos No More! highlighted the coming out of the Latinx queer community in Toronto, revealing a history of the work Latinx queers have done in creating essential spaces for themselves and those who follow after them.

As contributor to the exhibit Rico Rodriguez, who founded the storytelling collective Queers in Your Ears in 1997, told The ArQuives: “If our history is invisible then we run the risk of becoming invisible as a community. We’re not!”
In April and May of 2018, the exhibit Queering Family Photography was on display at the Stephen Bulger Gallery as part of the Scotiabank Contact Festival. The exhibit was a co-production of The Family Camera Network and The ArQuives, with additional help from The University of Winnipeg’s Two-Spirited Photography Collection. Lead curator Elspeth Brown, current Vice-President of The ArQuives’ board of directors, and co-curator Thy Phu hired Sajdeep Soomal to coordinate the initiative, and sought insight and support from documentary filmmaker Richard Fung, Indigenous activist Albert McLeod, along with other volunteers to mount this vibrant exhibition. Queering Family Photography examined the critical work that LGBTQ2+ family photos do in documenting and creating queer belonging. As Elspeth Brown put it, “photography offers a direct means of projecting queer joy and a potent resource for survival and resilience.”

In June of 2018, The ArQuives hosted “Promiscuous Archiving: The Joys of Curating Queer Black Legacies,” a multimedia presentation and conversation between London-based art photographer and queer visual activist Ajamu Ikwe-Tyehimba and Toronto visual artist, poet, and community activist Courtnay McFarlane. Both men have been active in the important work of archiving Black queer histories, with Ikwe-Tyehimba founding The Rukus! Black Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Cultural Archive with Topher Campbell and McFarlane curating Legacies in Motion: Black Queer Toronto Archival Project at the Myseum:Intersections festival in 2019. The provocative Queer Black Legacies conversation was recorded and can be viewed on-line through our digital portal.

In 2018, the Community Engagement Committee revamped their LGBTQ2+ Pride walking tour of Toronto’s Gay Village, with the essential labour of long-time volunteer Croft Campbell-Higgins, along with volunteers Douglas Haines and Rachel E. Beattie. In their revisions, the committee made sure to keep the tour up to date with the changing history of our queer communities and to prioritize the incorporation of underrepresented participants in queer history. With the partnership of Heritage Toronto, they ran two free public walking tours in August and September.

“These tours have always been popular,” notes Executive Director Raegan Swanson. “But last year, as a result of expanding the tour, and additional promotion online and in person, we had 100s of people join us on the two walking tours.”
In 2018, the CLGA operations committee provided public service support to 100 researchers, over the course of 193 research visits. Even though we had construction in the front of the building we remained open to the public three evenings and one afternoon a week. We accommodated our out-of-town researchers who required access to the collections after hours, and last year the number of on-line research requests increased substantially.

Our efforts to increase The ArQuives’ profile in the community is working; as last year saw archival donations from 140 donors, including donations from the 2-Spirited People of the 1st Nations, and Sherbourne Health Centre - SOY. Tobadon Waxman, Assistant to our on-going Trans Collection Project, was instrumental in conducting the research and outreach to Monica Forrester who donated with her valuable collection, which broadens the diversity and representation of our holdings.

Last year we made major progress processing the Mirha Soleil Ross, David Hawe, Cabbagetown Group Softball League fonds, and the The Coalition for Lesbian and Gay Rights in Ontario (CLGRO) collection.

*The number of accessions is not a measure of the quality nor quantity of an acquisitions.
The organization 2-Spirited People of the 1st Nations (founded in 1989 as the North American Indian Gay & Lesbian Society of Toronto) has donated a significant collection to The ArQuives from their years of Two Spirit community building and HIV/AIDS education and support. The collection includes photos of gatherings, programs from memorial services of Two Spirit community members, and organizational publications. This material significantly adds to our collection and broadens our stories, which have often ignored Indigenous people and lives.

SHERBOURNE HEALTH CENTRE - SOY (SUPPORTING OUR YOUTH)
Supporting Our Youth (SOY), a program that started in 1998 in Toronto, has donated 14 boxes full of organizational material to The ArQuives. SOY began as a three-year community development project for LGBTQ2+ youth and in 2004 found a permanent home in the Sherbourne Health Centre. Over the years, SOY has run programs and projects like Eco-Queers (2000-2002), Re-writing the Script: A Love Letter to Our Families (2001) in partnership with Desi-Queer: South Asian Video Project collective, Word Out!, and Super Trans Powers (2013). They are and have been an essential part of community life and organizing in Toronto over the past 20 years and the collection will add valuable stories to The ArQuives’ collections.

MONICA FORESTER
As the founder of Trans Pride Toronto, former employee of the 519, and current program coordinator of the Aboriginal Sex Workers Education and Outreach Project at Maggie’s, Monica Forrester is an important part of Toronto’s LGBTQ2+ history. Her papers include activist and community organization materials, zines, copies of speeches she’s given, and newspaper and magazine articles she has been featured in, as well as her journals, poems, photos, and postcards from friends. Forrester’s papers add an essential part of the story of activism by trans women of colour and sex workers to The ArQuives’ collections.

Our Generous Supporters

We thank all our generous donors, without your support we would not be able to keep our stories alive. We apologize if your name is missing from our list and ask that you bring this to our attention.
Last year was a pivotal time as we actively implemented our 5-year strategic plan across all committees and initiatives. On the financial front we aggressively pursued both new and familiar revenue channels, including our generous individual donors, bequests, grants, and government and corporate special project funding. We also expanded our strategy to build sustainable funding through licensing agreements for parts of our collection, which remain valuable assets.

Over the last three years the James E. Steward Estate funds were made available to The ArQuives, and by the end of 2018 we had accrued a significant and secure reserve account. This account is earmarked for future capital investment, but its strength makes it a resource to draw from for interim shortfalls.

In 2018 we secured funding from Canada Summer Jobs, the Documentary Heritage Communities Program and Young Canada Works to hire archivists and archive assistants for our operations. The City of Toronto, through the Community Events Department, supported our Scarborough Museum Exhibition and Myseum’s support was instrumental in mounting the Mirha-Soleil Ross Collection and Escondidos No More! exhibitions at The 519.

In 2018 our long-standing supporters — our individual donors — remain our single largest contributors, donating 36% to our operational budget.

In the last few years, the non-profit sector has faced the challenge of new corporate and government funding models redirecting money towards time-limited special projects with specific community or capital outcomes. In response we concentrated our efforts on applying for funding for special projects that also work to increase our long-term capacity. An example of this is the 2018 Pride and Remembrance Run donation which supplemented the TD contribution to complete our Online Database Access project.

Over the next four years, we will continue to pursue special project funding to increase our capacity and provide greater access to the collection and services to our communities.

An equally critical goal is to seek the resources and expertise to develop a strong, more engaged grassroots fundraising model. This framework will build on the strength of our current individual supporters and be informed by our commitment to greater diversity and representation of our communities, which is essential to The ArQuives’ future.
